Hearts defeat minds in council

St. Pats-Alexandra proposal. Community group wins key vote in bid to buy property

RUTH DAVENPORT ruth.davenport@metronews.ca

Rev. Rhonda Britton didn't applaud or cheer in the public gallery of Halifax's council chambers as regional council voted to take the first step towards selling St. Patrick's-Alexandra school to Britton's community organization.

But the pastor of the Cornwallis Street Baptist Church let out a jubilant whoop after leaving council chambers.

"Amazing, amazing, amazing. Never say die," she said.

Coun. Jennifer Watts made an impassioned plea to her colleagues to defeat a staff recommendation to reject the bid for the shuttered school on Brunswick Street from the North Central Community Council Association (NCCCA.)

"This is the community that ... takes things that we don't see as possible now and turns them into something that we stand and applaud," she said.

The NCCCA wants to turn the property into a community hub that would include a small business incubator, arts and cultural programming, and affordable housing. Tuesday's debate, characterized at one point as a "hearts vs. minds" discussion, saw councillors torn between the spirit of the community groups, and questions about their ability to bring the buildings up to code and maintain them.

"The evaluation has determined that the NCCCA submission has not outlined a viable proposal," said Coun. Gloria McCluskey, reading from the staff report. "As much as I would like to believe that the submission is supported and would be viable, I don't think it is."

Coun. Brad Johns pointed out community groups have overcome financial hurdles to resurrect vacant schools before, citing the Sackville Heights Community Centre.

"I have no doubt whatsoever ... that where there's a will, there's a way, financially," he said.

After rejecting the staff recommendation by a vote of 10-7, council passed Watts' motion to have staff begin preparing a report on the terms and conditions that would govern the eventual sale to the group.

The sale won't be finalized until the resolution of developer Joe Metlege's appeal of the court ruling last September that overturned the original sale of the property to him.

Howe only met woman for sex, friend testifies

Sexual assault trial.

'No other reason' local lawyer would want to see her, court hears

The friend of a Halifax-based lawyer charged with drugging and sexually assaulting a teenage woman in 2011 told the court on Tuesday he believed the accused and the complainant had met up that night to have sex.

"I guess you could call it a hookup," said Jeffery Brown, who took the stand on Tuesday for the trial's seventh day.

When asked what he meant by a hookup, Brown replied: "Sex."

"That's what Lyle (Howe) wanted," Brown said. "There's no other reason he would want to meet a new girl.'

Halifax defence lawyer Lyle Howe has pleaded not guilty to sexual assault and issuing a stupefying agent.

The court has heard that both Howe and Brown met the complainant at a local pub on March 20, 2011, after getting her number earlier that day from a co-worker at the store where she worked. Earlier in the trial, the complainant testified she understood the meeting to be a date initiated by Brown and that Howe was only present as a "wingman."

The three wound up at the complainant's apartment where, according to Brown, she and Howe had sex, using

"more than one condom."

Brown said he did not have sex with the complainant, though he reported she told him while mostly naked in the doorway of her apartment unit, "I don't think it's fair that I do stuff with (Howe) when I liked you first.'

Brown testified he saw money on the complainant's bedroom desk and waited until Howe left before stealing about $200.

'At the time I thought it would benefit me to take the money," he said.

Brown pleaded guilty and was sentenced in December 2013 for theft under $5,000. He also faced the same charges as Howe, but they were later stayed by the Crown.

The complainant - now 22 and whose name is protected under a publication ban — said she woke up the morning after, naked and disoriented on her roommate's floor, with condoms strewn about the apartment and feeling sore in her anus and

Landlord licensing needed for safe housing, say advocates

Gimme shelter. Group says city slumlords must be held accountable

HALEY RYAN haley.ryan@metronews.ca

Although Bruce Muir doesn't live the same slum situation described by many people outside Halifax City Hall on Tuesday, he said it's important for everyone to push for landlord licensing because a good society cares about everybody in the community, and "not just the people who can afford it."

About a dozen people holding rubber spiders and signs painted with rats or broken toilets attended a rally hosted by the local ACORN chapter (the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now), to draw attention to slum landlords who aren't being held accountable in the current complaint-based system.

"It should be understood that you're not moving into a rat-infested apartment."

"We should make sure that people can live in housing that's safe and healthy," said Muir after the protest.

Scott Domenie, co-chair of ACORN, said those with a low income are especially vulnerable because they don't have funds to move away from a bad situation.

He said Halifax regional council should introduce landlord licences, which would cost landlords $30 a year and be awarded if their properties passed a mandatory yearly inspection.

If a landlord failed an inspection due to mould, leaky pipes, or other factors that break the standards of the M-100 residential occupancies bylaw, Domenie said they would be fined $100,000.

The yearly fees would go towards hiring more inspectors, he said, adding Toronto and Vancouver have similar programs

Catherine, who preferred not to give her last name, spoke to the crowd about how the heat in her apartment doesn't work. Last winter, she said her home was so cold she had to stay with friends for a few days.

Devon Berquist has found asbestos in her building in the past, and said a licence system is important because "it should be understood that you're not moving into a rat-infested apartment."

She said tenants would no longer have to worry about their rent going up, or other retaliation from the landlord if they filed a complaint.

"Whether legal or not, it's a very real fear for a lot of tenants," Berquist said.

Experts to work on alcohol policy consultation

Regional council has approved the creation of a reference group to inform the public consultation process on a municipal alcohol policy.

Councillors rejected a consultation process proposed by staff, which would have started with telephone surveys and then proceeded to a "more detailed engagement" with the community.

Several councillors expressed concern over initiating the process with a telephone survey rather than in-person consultation.

At Coun. Jennifer Watts' urging, council defeated that proposal and adopted her motion to create a group comprised of police, academics, Capital Health and other health promotion staff and industry representatives.

That group will work with city staff to identify the issues that need focus and clarity, and determine the best approach to public consultation

City councillors applaud, endorse review on crime

Data. Report suggests some violent offences have fallen significantly

DAVENPORT

Halifax regional councillors have endorsed the review of a 2008 report on violent crime and public safety, which the mayor emphasized was not a report on the police.

"This ... affects housing, it affects how we do recreation, it affects how we do finance, it affects schools," said Mayor Mike Savage during the committee of the whole discussion Tuesday.

Dalhousie University criminologist Don Clairmont, along with a team of associates, compiled the report over the last year.

It reviews the findings of a 2008 task force report established by former Mayor Peter Kelly in response to a rash of youth and gang violence.
Clairmont said violence and property crime has fallen by 50 per cent since then, but

Some recommendations of the Clairmont report:

- Establish a domestic violence and a drug treatment court.
- "Discuss and strategize" the implications of new federal regulations around the sex trade, particularly municipal issues of zoning, housing regulations, and escort-services licensing.
- A "holistic examination" of the closing hours for bars and restaurants downtown, use tax incentives to encourage mixed use gender-based violence, which includes sexual assault and domestic violence, has not seen a similar decline.

"Most literature I've looked at doesn't think that they're going to get at this subculture through more law," he said. "It's more a question of people standing up ... exploring areas where male dominance is more subtle."

Several councillors applauded the report's emphasis on social programs and partnerships to fight crime through proactive measures.

"Do we want to act ... to provide leadership to our federal and provincial partners and non-profits ... and encourage these programs that lead to that social cohesion," challenged Coun. Waye Mason, who amended the motion to require a twice-yearly staff tions.

Suspended cop behind bars after Newfoundland arrest

Mosher was arrested just after 12 a.m. on May 11 at a licensed establishment on the popular bar-lined street, according to police.

Police say Mosher remains in custody at a St. John's jail. Mosher, 30, was first charged by the Serious Incident Response Team in February with sexual assault and administering a noxious substance with intent to aggrieve after an alleged incident last November.

He is due in court for that case on June 17 for a preliminary inquiry, and remains suspended from the Halifax Regional Police without pay or benefits.

Vehicle sought in hit-and-run

Police are asking for the public's help in finding a car involved in a hit-and-run incident in Halifax.

Officers arrived at the 3300 block of Agricola Street at 4:30 a.m. Sunday, after a witness reported that a car had been struck by another vehicle and pushed one block down the street.

According to a release, police said damage to the car was "extensive," but there were no injuries reported since there was no one in the car at the time.

Given the heavy damage to the second car, police said it's likely that the suspect's car, described as a metallic blue four-door sedan, could not have travelled far from the scene.

BP aims for exploration well in 2017: President

Offshore. Company shoots seismic off Nova Scotia; province announced funding for analysis of seismic data

BP Canada is aiming to have an exploration well in deep waters off the coast of Nova Scotia by 2017 if offshore seismic work goes well, the company's president said Tuesday.

Stephen Willis spoke after touring a seismic vessel in Halifax that is preparing to steam to the company's holdings about 300 kilometres southeast of the city on the Scotian shelf.

Willis toured the seismic vessel Western Neptune with Premier Stephen McNeil. Company spokeswoman Anita Perry says up to nine vessels expect to begin work within a week.

Willis said after seismic information is gathered, years of work lie ahead before Nova Scotia would see an exploration well.

"We have exploration activities worldwide.... We hope to add a Nova Scotia well into that portfolio should we see positive results from the seis-

BP's $1B commitment

The effort is part of a $1-billion exploration commitment BP has made in the province as the firm searches for hydrocarbons in its deepwater leases, which include waters that reach depths of 3,000 metres.

mic survey this year, in 2017 or thereabouts," he said.

The provincial government also announced Tuesday that it will fund analysis of seismic and other geological data provided to oil and gas firms interested in the province's offshore.

McNeil said the Liberal government will spend $12 million over the next four years on the data.

Energy Minister Andrew Younger said the data analysis will be funded prior to each round of bids for offshore exploration leases.

The Canada-Nova Scotia Offshore Petroleum Board recently invited calls for exploration bids on the Laurentian sub-basin properties, a region in the Cabot Strait that is about 340 kilometres southwest of St. John's, N.L.

Younger said bidding will close on Oct. 30 and he expects existing research will help attract interest.

"We're hearing interest from companies all over the world who are very closely looking at that opportunity," said Younger.

He said the data was collected years ago, but consultants are taking a look at it again.

"There's much better ways to reprocess data that was collected years ago and better understand it. They're looking for the age of rock, the type of rock formations, and the presence of certain salts that can give you an indication of whether it's gas or oil," he said.

"It's about probabilities and this is about reducing the risk." Willis said the earlier data — called the Project Fairway Analysis — helped his company decide to invest in exploration in Nova Scotia's offshore in 2012.

He also said it is considering bidding for exploration leases in the Laurentian sub-basin, though no firm decisions have been taken.

Input sought on waste rule changes

Diversion. Producers may become more responsible for recycling

The Nova Scotia government wants to see more garbage diverted from its landfills.

Environment Minister Randy Delorey says the government is seeking public input on proposed changes to solidwaste regulations.

A discussion paper says the province wants to promote more reuse and recycling through new disposal bans and changes to recycling rules.

"Nova Scotia has a reputation for innovation and success in handling our solid waste," Delorey says in a statement. "The proposed changes are intended to build on our past success while meeting our mandate to divert even more products for reuse and recycling."

Among other things, the province is looking at making some producers responsible for recycling their products.

As well, the government says there could be new disposal bans on packaging, paper, compact fluorescent light bulbs and batteries.

The province is also looking into changing its used-tire program. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Testing. Companies get OK for Segway pilot

The Nova Scotia government has approved the participation of three companies in a pilot program to test and evaluate Segway use on the province's streets and sidewalks.

The successful participants are Segway Nova Scotia in Halifax, McGinley's Yard and Garden Equipment Inc. in Truro, and Chester Marine Services Ltd. of Chester.

The Transportation Department says applications can still be submitted to participate for the remainder of the pilot period, which ends in 2016.

Under the pilot program, Segways won't be allowed to operate at speeds faster than 20 kilometres an hour or travel on roads with a speed limit higher than 60 kilometres an hour.

Following the pilot's conclusion, the department will determine if amendments will be made to the Motor Vehicle Act to permanently allow Segway use in the province.

Under the current law, Segways are not allowed on public roads. The Canadian Press

Lac-Mégantic accused arraigned

Quebec train disaster. Appearing in makeshift courtroom in Lac-Mégantic, three accused men posted bail and were released

Three men arrested in the Lac-Mégantic train disaster were released Tuesday after being arraigned on 47 charges of criminal negligence causing death.

Thomas Harding, Jean Demaitre and Richard Labrie each had to post $15,000 bail after appearing in a makeshift courtroom in Lac-Mégantic.

They were then freed on various conditions pending their next court appearance on Sept. 11. They can't change their address and can't work in the rail industry without proper supervision.

Forty-seven people were killed after a runaway train carrying crude oil derailed in Lac-Mégantic in the wee hours of last July 6 before it exploded.

Harding had completed his shift as the train's engineer earlier that evening and left the train unattended to sleep at a local inn.

The Crown has identified Labrie, 55, as the railway traffic controller and Demaitre, 50, as the manager of train operations.

The insolvent Montreal, Maine and Atlantic Railway faces the same criminal charges.

Earlier on Tuesday, Harding's lawyer blasted as "brutal" the manner in which they stormed into his client's residence to arrest him.

"It was the kind of arrest you would do for some heavily armed Hells Angel," said Thomas Walsh. "Basically, the whole SWAT squad was there to arrest one guy who has been living in the same place since this tragedy happened ... They are just killing a mouse with a cannon," Walsh said.

Now before the courts

A conviction on charges of criminal negligence causing death carries a maximum life sentence.

- "That there are criminal charges, I think it's important," said Karine Blanchette, an employee of the Musi-Café, the establishment in the heart of town where many people died.
 "Finally, there's justice. But it does not bring back the people we lost and our heritage. The pollution in our environment will also remain."
- Crown spokesman Rene Verret said prosecutors decided to file these charges after an analysis of the evidence. But these men might not be the only ones charged. Several civil suits have been filed, but the criminal charges mark a first.

Bill C-23. Harper's 'Fair Elections Act' passes

The Conservatives have used their majority muscle in the House of Commons to pass a controversial bill that makes sweeping changes to election laws.

Bill C-23, dubbed the Fair Elections Act, passed by a vote of 146 to 123.

The bill was virtually universally panned by electoral experts when it was first introduced and it has been a controversial piece of legislation.

The Harper government modified or removed some of the most contentious provisions — including backing down on plans to eliminate vouching, muzzle the chief electoral officer and create a loophole that would allow rich, established parties to spend untold millions more during election campaigns.

But the changes weren't enough to mollify opposition parties. The bill now moves to the Conservative-dominated Senate for approval.

Replacing grisly hunts with grizzly viewings

An enticing offer. First Nations are offering two grizzly hunters an all-expenses-paid, five-night guided bear viewing experience

B.C.'s Coastal First Nations hope a luxurious offer will encourage grizzly hunters to exchange gunsights for sightseeing.

Spirit Bear Lodge, a First Nations-owned and operated facility near Klemtu, on the central coast, is offering an allexpenses-paid, five-night guided bear-viewing experience to two hunters.

In exchange for the trip, the selected hunters must agree to hand over their valid licence allowing them to bag a grizzly bear this year within Coastal First Nations territories.

First Nations point to research showing bears in the region are worth more alive than they are dead.

Heiltsuk Coastwatch Director William Housty hunts to feed his family, but says it is against anyone's common values to kill for fun and he urges hunters to leave their guns behind and see grizzlies from a First Nations perspective.

This year's deadline for limited-entry hunt licences expires later this month and eligible hunters interested in trading their licence for the bear viewing trip must contact Spirit Bear Lodge to be included in the random draw.

Endangered. Alberta to sell mountain caribou habitat to energy industry

The Alberta government is planning to sell off crucial caribou habitat to the energy industry just days after a federal scientific panel said the herds were in immediate danger of vanishing completely.

vanishing completely.
Starting Wednesday, Alberta Energy is to auction off 1,700 hectares of land north of Grande Cache — home to the remaining members of several herds of mountain caribou.

A federal scientific panel ruled earlier this month that those herds should be assessed as endangered, the highest level of threat available under Canadian law, because their numbers have tumbled by about 60 per cent over the last decade.

"Most of it's industrial disturbance," said Justina Ray, one of the biologists who completed the assessment for Environment Canada's Committee on the Status of Endangered Wildlife in Canada.

About 1,200 hectares on the block is on the range of the 78-animal Narraway herd.

Data compiled by Global Forest Watch suggests more than 81 per cent of that range is already disrupted.

Alberta Energy spokesman Mike Feenstra said the province recognizes mountain caribou as threatened, if not endangered. Temporary holds have been placed on lease sales on the ranges of two other herds, he said.

Museum seeks local help with second rotting whale carcass

The Royal Ontario Museum is seeking local help before it decides whether it will handle a second blue whale carcass in western Newfoundland.

Mark Engstrom, deputy director of collections and research for the museum, says he'll decide in the next day or two whether work on dead whale in Rocky Harbour will go ahead.

"We're still reviewing finances and we're seeing if we can get any local assistance with the Rocky Harbour whale," Engstrom said Tuesday.

His team was also packing the last of the bones from the 23-metre female whale that will be trucked to Trenton, Ont., where Research Casting International, which specializes in museum displays, will help further handle the remains.

Those specimens will later become accessible to scientists as part of the ROM's collection. The skeleton may also be assembled for display if funds are smilebles.

Engstrom had hoped to handle both whales after local officials asked for help dealing with the rotting carcasses out of concerns they could harm business in a tourism zone. But he said unexpected costs have added up. THE CANADIAN PRESS

U.S. aircraft searching for Nigerian schoolgirls

Foreign assistance.

Britain and the U.S. are now actively helping Nigeria's government to rescue the girls

A Nigerian government official said "all options are open" in efforts to rescue almost 300 abducted schoolgirls from their captors as U.S. reconnaissance aircraft started flying over the West African country in a search effort.

According to a senior defence official in Washington, the U.S. is using a manned MC-12 surveillance aircraft, which is based in Niger, to conduct missions in Nigeria. In addition to the turboprop model which has seen heavy use in Afghanistan, U.S. officials are also considering the use of drones. At this point the surveillance missions are

Families to view video released by Boko Haram

Boko Haram, the group that kidnapped the girls last month from a school in Borno state, released a video Monday purporting to show some of the girls.

The group's leader, who appears separately, says in the video: "I swear to almighty Allah, you will not see them again until you release our brothers that you have captured." He has previously threatened to sell the girls into slavery.

Hussein Monguno, an official with a civic group called the Borno Yobe People's Forum, said representatives of the families of the missing girls had been invited to the Borno governor's residence in the Nigerian capital of Abuja to view the video to see if they can "verify" that their children are in the video.

Britain, which has dispatched security experts to Nigeria, said it is looking to offer "longer-term counter-terrorism solutions to prevent such attacks in the future and defeat Boko Haram."

The U.S. is sharing commercial satellite imagery with the Nigerian government and is flying manned intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance aircraft over Nigeria with the Nigerian government's permission, a senior U.S. official said on Monday

Nigeria's government initially suggested there would be no negotiations with Boko Haram, but it appears that stance may be relaxed.

Mike Ömeri, the director of the government's information agency, said the government will "use whatever kind of action" it takes to free the girls. He also warned that a military operation, with foreign help, was possible.

"At the moment, because all options are open we are interacting with experts, military and intelligence experts from other parts of the world," he said late Monday.

Ukraine skeptical about plan pushed by Germany

Germany's foreign minister tried to broker quick talks between Ukraine's central government and pro-Russia separatists. However, Ukraine remained skeptical Tuesday as fighting claimed six more lives in the restive east.

Six Ukrainian servicemen were ambushed and killed and eight others wounded Tuesday afternoon outside the town of Kramatorsk, which is in the Donetsk region, one of two in eastern Ukraine that declared independence on Monday. They were attacked by at least 30 insurgents using grenade launchers and automatic weapons.

The plan laid out by the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe, a trans-Atlantic security group, calls on all sides to refrain from violence and urges amnesty for those involved in the unrest as well as talks on decentralization and the status of the Russian language.

But Ukrainian officials sounded skeptical Tuesday about the OSCE plan. Speaking in Brussels, acting Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk thanked the OSCE but said Ukraine has drawn up its own "road map" for ending the crisis and noted the people of his country should settle the issue themselves.

conomic reforms. YVES LOGGHE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Russia, meanwhile, called Tuesday for a swift implementation of the OSCE plan, saying its demand to end violence means that Kyiv should stop its military operation to recapture buildings in the east, lift its blockade of cities and towns, pull its forces from eastern regions and release all insurgents. It added that it expects separatists in Ukraine's Donetsk and Luhansk regions to respond in kind if Kyiv does.

Yevhen Perebiynis, spokesman for the Ukrainian foreign ministry, lamented Tuesday that the OSCE deal does not specifically oblige Russia to do anything.

Weight pain. Minister of health draws a hard line in his refusal to fund life-saving treatment for obesity

BROWN

Criticism of the Ministry of Health reached a new level this week as two more advocacy groups joined calls for the ministry to begin funding an effective anti-obesity treatment that has been commercially available for more than a decade.

Healthy Weight Canada and End Obesity Now say that the ministry is denying Canadians access to what they consider a life-saving treatment.

Canada continues to deny health care coverage for Zaponectin, an injectable hormone therapy that controls appetite, boosts metabolism and promotes weight loss. It also protects against glucose intolerance and insulin resistance — two conditions that are precursors to adult-onset diabetes.

Cost for the initial and follow-up treatments can reach over $250,000 — an amount out of reach for many of the patients who need it most.

Over the years, the ministry has argued Zaponectin is a nonessential treatment, falling into the alternative therapy and cosmetic category.

"Obesity is a lifestyle choice," said Marcus Aarles, minister of health and longterm care for the ruling Newer Democratic Party.

Aarles has repeatedly come under criticism for the hard line he has taken in refusing to fund the treatment, especially when, earlier this year, The American Republic agreed to add Zaponectin as an approved and funded medical treatment.

The drug first appeared on the market in 2053 and was immediately adopted by the wealthy as a way to maintain svelte physiques. The treatment stimulates the production of adiponectin, a hormone secreted from fat cells. In an individual of healthy weight, adiponectin stimulates metabolism, protects against cellular damage and controls appetite. However, as a person becomes obese, their body stops producing the hormone.

"It is not the duty of the government to fund treatments that help people look better in bikinis," Aarles said at the time.

"It's terrifying that the man making important decisions about our health care has such a prejudiced view of those suffering from obesity," said Anne Pechlof, director of End Obesity Now, a group that works to promote healthy body weight through gene and hormone therapy.

On Tuesday, Pechlof led a group of more than 100 protesters to Parliament Hill, demanding that the government immediately begin funding Zaponectin. "In 2064, it's a disgrace that people are dying of turn-of-the-century ailments like cardiovascular disease and diabetes. The Newer Democratic Party government doesn't take a long-term view with this treatment," said Pechlof.

"If more people had access to Zaponectin, we would eliminate the need to treat obestity-related ailments."

Aarles, however, maintains responsibility for one's health lies with the individual. "Time and again, we see that a healthy diet and exercise are all that's needed to avoid many of these diseases. The government refuses to burden the taxpayer with the mistakes of people who have no self-control.

"We aren't asking for this to look good," said Pechlof at the rally. "We are asking for this to even the playing field between rich and poor. Not only are those who can't afford this

Ford found. Former Toronto mayor resurfaces after half a century in hiding

Former Toronto mayor Rob Ford came out of hiding Tuesday, a half century after he disappeared amid the biggest scandal of that era.

In 2014, Ford left Toronto in the middle of his re-election campaign to seek help for his drug and alcohol use after he was caught on numerous videos making derogatory comments about women and minorities

Ford did not return by election day. As time went by, his brother, Coun. Doug Ford, continued to refuse to identify the rehab facility Ford was at for treatment, and theories about his whereabouts multiplied.

In late 2016, the media frenzy over Ford's whereabouts reached a fever pitch over a suspected Ford sighting in the Ontario wilderness, but it turned out to be a balding bear.

Today, "Ford Truthers" continue to promote the idea that Ford's candidacy was a leftwing conspiracy engineered to make conservatives look bad and claim that Rob Ford — and in fact the whole Ford family — were only ever actors.

In the age of blanket surveillance, most observers concluded that with no reputable sighting of him in all these years, he must have died.

However Ford, alive, well and remarkably fit for a 97-year-old, shocked everyone Tuesday when he called an unexpected press conference. He revealed that he's been at a yoga retreat on a remote island off B.C. for the last five decades, one of the few places the electronic eyes of the government and the press neglected to watch.

"Namaste, maggots," he said, in his first media scrum in 50 years. "Yoga is amazing. It reminds me of football camp. Kind of like the Washington Redskins camp I went to as a Following a period of medically supervised detox back in 2014, Ford turned to yoga therapy to work through his mental health issues. After finding he was no longer angry with his political opponents, he had no desire to return to politics, he said.

"I've been working out like an animal," he said. "Those yogi, they really work at their downward dogs."

ORGAN DISPUTE JEOPARDIZES PHENOM'S CAREER

MCNEIL

He may skate like Bobby Orr and make plays like The Great One, but hockey's current golden boy also happens to have something those legendary players never had — super

The Trans-National Hockey League confirmed Tuesday what had been rumoured on viral media for weeks - Joseph Bijral of the Regina Ice Breakers has a pair of vatgrown lungs. They're bigger, stronger, and operate at about 12 per cent greater efficiency than your average TNHL forward's. Now that his full medical records have been made public by the young phenom himself, we know Bijral received the artificial organs as a last-resort, lifesaving measure after a near-fatal vehicular accident at age 11. He's 21 now. Artificially-grown organ technology was in its adolescence years ago, even today, full-lung replacements are complicated by rejection factors. "It was just something that said Bijral at an Ice Breakers' media holocaust yesterday. "I wouldn't be here right now without this thing.

"I never thought it would be a problem, honestly.

Turns out, it's a big problem. After finally acknowledging the lung issue on Tuesday, TNHL spokesperson Janice Marbeta announced a Special Competitive Oversight Committee meeting to determine whether Bijral's lungs fall under the sports world's latest buzzword — "unintentional performance enhancement."

"Effective immediately," Marbeta said, "Joseph Bijral will be suspended from active league play until such time as we can determine his status in regards to unintentional performance enhancement. Hollow words, perhaps, considering the regular season is already over, and the Ice Breakers didn't make the 2064 playoffs.

If this cial committee decides Bijral is good to play, it's unlikely much of anything in the league will to Jonathan Lane, former assistant to the vice-president of TNHL operations. "There aren't many people out there walking around with superlungs. This whole to-do pretty much applies just to Joey,

If the TNHL does opt to ban Bijral, it could be the end to a promising career that never was. But for hockey fans in Regina, still starving for their first Stanley Cup 23 years after the club's inception in 2041, hope is not lost. Lane said he's confident any decision the committee reaches is unlikely to roll against the young left winger, although he didn't rule out the league ordering a capacity valve be installed in Bijral's lungs to limit their breathing advantage.

Lane's been vocal on viral media about the issue. "They'll take their time over the summer humming and hawing about it, wait till the last minute, then let him play next year. It might be another full season or two before they (the TNHL committee) finally formalize a ruling, but in the meantime, believe me, he'll play."

Olympic fallout

Will Bijral compéte in Pyongyang 2066?

Shortly after the Trans-National Hockey League acknowledged Joseph Bijral's so-called superlungs, the sports world started buzzing with speculation about how an Olympic committee might approach

The IOC has a history of tougher rules, stricter policies and perhaps a higher moral obligation than private leagues. It's possible they might view Bijral's lungs as an unfair advantage, and decide to even the playing field, or ban him from competing.

With the 2066 Pyongyang

Winter Olympics looming, there is little doubt that Hockey Canada is watching the outcome of the TNHL committee decision with great interest.

A spokesperson told Metro that if Bijral was barred from Olympic participation, it would be a huge loss for the team, looking to redeem itself after a disappointing fourthplace finish in the last Winter Games. colin mcneil/metro

Privacy. You'd like to forget those wild party pics; now Google may have to, as well

People should have some say over the results that pop up when they conduct a vanity search online, Europe's highest court said Tuesday.

In a landmark decision, The Court of Justice of the European Union said Google must listen and sometimes comply when individuals ask the Internet search giant to remove links to newspaper articles or websites containing personal information.

Campaigners say the ruling effectively backs individual privacy rights over the freedom of information.

In an advisory judgment stemming from a lawsuit against Google that will affect all search engines, including Yahoo and Microsoft's Bing, the court said a search on a person's name yields a results page that amounts to an individual profile, one that a person has some right to control over under European privacy laws. As such, the court said people should be able to ask to have links to private information removed. That's true even when a non-Google website is still hosting the information

In the ruling, the court said people "may address such a request directly to the operator of the search engine ... which must then duly examine its merits." In addition, it said search engines must weigh "the legitimate interest of Internet users potentially interested in having access to that information" against the right to privacy and protection of personal data.

When an agreement can't be reached, the Luxembourg-based court said the matter can be referred to a local judge or regulator.

The decision came as a surprise since it went counter to the advice the court received from its own top lawyer last year. The European court became involved after a Spanish appeals court asked for its opinion in 200 pending cases. Initially billed as a test of "the right to be forgotten," the impact of Tuesday's wider ruling could be far and wide. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UN mulling over a ban on 'killer robots'

United Nations.

Technology does not exist yet, but diplomats say it's time to start debating the legal, moral and ethical issues

Diplomats urged the adoption of new international laws Tuesday that could govern or outright forbid the use of killer robots if the technology becomes reality someday.

At the first United Nations meeting devoted to the subject, representatives began trying to define the limits and responsibilities of so-called lethal autonomous weapons systems that could go beyond human-directed drones already being used by some armies today.

"All too often international law only responds to atrocities and suffering once it has happened," Michael Moeller, acting head of the UN's European headquarters in Geneva, told diplomats at the start of the four-day gathering. "You have the opportunity to take preemptive action and ensure that the ultimate decision to end life remains firmly under human control."

He noted that the UN treaty they were meeting to discuss — the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons adopted by 117 nations including the world's major powers — was used before to prohibit the use of blinding laser weapons in the 1990s before they were ever deployed on the battlefield, and this "serves as an example."

MESSY, RUDE AND WORTH EVERY OFFENCE

Most people have heard about the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, but it seems to have escaped the notice of the people who run Instagram (the same people who run Facebook).

Especially this bit—Section 2(b): "Everyone has the following fundamental freedoms: Freedom of thought, belief, opinion and expression, including freedom of the press and other media of communication."

Like, Instagram?

With exquisite timing, just before Mother's Day, Instagram shut down Heather Bays' account because it featured pictures of her breast-feeding her 20-month old daughter. Heather, who's originally from Winnipeg and now lives in Toronto, may have thought she was sharing a beautiful picture celebrating motherhood with her community, but Instagram apparently thought she was trafficking in child pornography.

Seriously. One photo showed her daughter's bare torso, and another one exposed a full breast and someone took offence and complained.

Let's remember that Heather Bays is a maternity photographer. Unlike millions of moronic selfies, her photos are actually good. Meanwhile, over in Vancouver, people are ring to get Dr. Seuss banned again. This time, it's If I Ran the Zoo, because there's a line about zoo helpers who "all wear their eyes at a slant" alongside illustrations of Asian stereotypes. While this was all viewed as perfectly acceptable back in 1950, it is offensive through a 2014 lens.

The Vancouver Public Library is resisting the call for the ban, wisely recognizing that if they ban Dr. Seuss, they would have to ban half the world's literature, from Sophocles to the Arabian Nights.

At one time or another, everything and everyone offends. These days, everyone is offended. I don't envy the gatekeepers. When everything is offensive, what do you do?

If you ask me, it's simple. Just remember the Nazis. They loved to find things offensive. They burned books and banned works of art because they were decadent or written by Jews. The Nazis weren't interested in freedom of thought, belief, etc. In fact, they loathed and opposed such things.

Good thing we're not like the Nazis, eh?

Look. As far as I'm concerned, lots of things are offensive. There are times when I wish country music, Hallmark greeting cards and cat videos were ruthlessly suppressed. But then I come to my senses.

We need to remember the great value of freedom. Right now in Nigeria, hundreds of schoolgirls have been kidnapped by narrow-minded extremists to prevent them from being exposed to western education. This is the logical dead end of censorship. Freedom is messy, rude and annoying, but it beats oppression and slavery every time.

So let's cut everyone a little slack. As far as I know, the Charter of Rights and Freedoms doesn't protect your right to be offended. At least not yet.

Tortoise in shark's clothing

Shelling out for a new look

'Shell suits' are back in fashion - for tortoises and snails at least. The madeto-measure, tea cosy-style crochet designs that snuggly fit any shelled frame are the work of Katie Bradley. The project has fast become a sell-out success with orders coming in from all over the world and Bradley now offers 25 designs, including shark and stegosaurus outfits on Etsy.com. The U.S.-based crocheter tells Metro about the family ioke that became a fashion phenomenon.

The fashion industry is notoriously fast-paced with its constantly changing trends. will you be offering sea-sonal collections or are you happy to continue crocheting at a snail's pace? Quite a few of my designs already are seasonal. I am working on several patriotic Indepen-dence Day designs, and also have plans for some new Hal-loween tortoise cosies (one design looks like an eyeball). I've also made some more glamorous designs for clients by incorporating sequins and beads by special request.

Sequins and beads sound like you're heading into couture. Are the cosies only for special occasions? The snails only wear their cosies for photo ops. The rest of the time they're happy to dine nude in my garden

Of course. Why is there such demand for what's a frankly bizarre item? Tortoise keepers love their tortoises. Often the critter has been in the family for a long time, and is considered a part of the family. People like to dress up their dogs, cats, chickens and frogs... s dressing up a tortoise isn't such a strange idea. OK, it is a strange idea, but is a very cute strange idea.

Turn the fables on baseball

Diamond movies.

Baseball brings out fantastic sports stories that audiences love

FOCUS Richard Crouse scene@metronews.ca

"I still get such a bang out of it," says Buck Weaver (John Cusack) in Eight Men Out, "playing ball."

Given the number of sports movies that have been released in the last 30 years, apparently audiences also get a bang out of watching films about baseball.

This weekend, Jon Hamm stars in a new ball picture, Million Dollar Arm. The Mad Men star plays real-life sports agent J.B. Bernstein who recruited Indian cricket players Rinku Singh and Dinesh Patel for the Pittsburgh Pirter.

It's an unconventional baseball movie, but there seems to be something about the sport that lends itself to fantastic stories and fables.

Roger Ebert called Field of Dreams, "a religious picture," then added, "but the religion is baseball." In this 1989 hit
Kevin Costner plays an Iowa corn farmer who hears a mysterious voice. "If you build it, he will come." The
"it" is a baseball diamond and the "he" is Shoeless Joe
Jackson, the legendary outfielder for the disgraced 1919
Chicago White Sox.

The movie uses a baseball theme as a backdrop for a story about following your dreams, believing in the impossible and the idea that baseball was "a symbol of all that was once good in America."

ica."

The film struck a chord with audiences and tourists alike. Since its release, the field built for the film in Dubuque County, Iowa has attracted hundreds of thousands of people, and spawned new restaurants, shops, a hotel, all in a town of only 4,000 people. Robert Redford's film The Natural looks to Arthurian legends for its story. Redford plays Roy Hobbs, a young pitcher with natural ability. Cut down in his prime by a tragic accident, he disappears, only to return many years later to become a star at an age when most players are hanging up their gloves. "It took me 16 years to get here," he says. "You play me, and I'll give you the best I got."

America's got religion

Field of Dreams is "a religious picture ... but the religion is baseball."

Roger Ebert

Based on

Based on a novel by Bernard Malamud, the characters in The Natural each represent a person from ancient literature.

- There are elements of Round Table Knight Percival's pursuit of the Holy Grail present in Hobbs' story.
- He's a Knight (literally, his team is called The Knights) who must bring back the Grail, or pennant, to team manager Pop Fisher, whose name is an alias for the Fisher King, keeper of the Grail.

 If you think that is reading too much into the story, perhaps Woody Allen in Zelig is more your speed. "I love baseball. You know it doesn't have to mean anything, it's just beautiful to watch."

Q&A

Lake Bell the next Sandra Bullock?

Million Dollar Arm producer likens his casting of Lake Bell — known for more comic acting and for directing last year's In a World — as Jon Hamm's love interest in the true baseball tale to when he cast an unknown Sandra Bullock in While You Were Sleeping nearly 20 years ago. "She's got a great career in front of her," Roth says. So, no pressure, right Lake? I was wondering, after Joe Roth made the Sandra Bullock comparison, if you're feeling any extra career pressure already. I was like, "Damn. Joe."

I was like, "Damn, Joe." We'll see how that plays out (laughs). No, I was hugely flattered just because obviously I love Sandra Bullock, and she's fantastic ... It was hugely complimentary. And it legitimately made me blush.

You have such a great, easy time riffing with Jon.

Jon and I are lucky because we've been pals for such a long time, though this is the first time that we got to do a movie together. We do Children's Hospital, but he just rolls in when he wants to for an episode here or there while we're doing the show. This was fun because we were on equal ground in scenes and got to sink our teeth into something. But yeah, I think that kind of banter is something that we both enjoy.

Miley's Wrecking Ball an ode to her exes

If there was any doubt that Miley Cyrus' hit Wrecking Ball was about ex-fiancé Liam Hemsworth, the former Disney star seemed to put it to rest during an expletive-filled intro to the song during a London club performance, according to TMZ. "Every time you get in your car, you're going to hear my f-ing song on the f—ing radio, you piece of s—," she shouted to the crowd. "I'm going to tell those motherf-ers that broke my heart, particularly one, to suck my fat dand to enjoy hearing this song for the rest of your life." During the show, Cyrus also licked a giant inflatable penis and courted further controversy by making a date-rape joke while wishing a straight male friend a happy birthday.

Aniston's perfect hair 'at odds with a brush'

Jennifer Aniston has long been admired for her hair, but she wants the world to know that it hasn't been easy. In fact, it's been a struggle. "The thing that makes me chuckle is when I hear that my hair is so this or so that," she tells the Boston Globe during a visit to her hair product shop, Living Proof. "My hair is always at odds with a brush and a hair dryer. To get my hair straight can be a struggle."

Solange vs. Jay Z: The aftermath

MELINDA TAUB

I'm not going to lie. This item is mostly an excuse to once again watch the amazing footage of Solange Knowles attacking her brother-in-law, Jay Z, after the Met Gala.

I know everybody watched it at least three times on Monday (once when the news broke on TMZ, once when the extended footage came out, and once later to point out to your friends how Beyoncé just stood there) but it will never be enough.

Apparently Solange was on a bit of a tear all evening. Earlier at the same Met Gala after-party at The Standard hotel, Solange yelled at designer Rachel Roy, sources tell Us Weekly. One source says Beyoncé "got in the middle of" her sister's fracas with Roy; another source said Roy was just one of a group Solange harangued.

This still doesn't tell us what had Solange so riled up. However, she did delete all of her shots of Beyoncé from her Instagram account on Monday, save for this one from 2013, with music video director Melina Matsoukas.

What does it all mean? Alas, we do not know. The Jay/Bey PR machine is just too powerful to let the real story out. I guess the only comfort we have in these troubled times is to watch the footage again.

So Jennifer Lawrence really is that awésome

Hugh Jackman is happy to confirm the rumours that Jennifer Lawrence is awesome. What you see is what you get, and I've met her and worked with her. The way you imagine her to be is how she is," he tells E! News. "She just manages to handle this incredible fame and power that she has with real ease. On top of that, she's a brilliant actor. She's not only one of the most talented actors I've met, she's one of the most authentic. Very down-to-earth, no ego. She has a lot of fun doing what she does.

Alec pedals his way to a pair of handcuffs

Actor Alec Baldwin was arrested and issued two summonses after allegedly acting belligerently toward two officers who had stopped him for riding his bicycle the wrong way down a New York City street, police said Tuesday.

The 30 Rock star was riding his bike the wrong way at 16th Street and Fifth Avenue near Union Square Park in Manhattan when he was stopped at about 10:15 a.m.

and asked to show identification, they said.

Police say Baldwin, 56, refused to show his ID and acted belligerently, prompting the officers to handcuff him and take him, and his bicycle, to a nearby precinct.

Baldwin was issued two summonses - for riding a bike the wrong way down a street and for disorderly conduct - and was then released, police said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dive into the cocktails and culture that Curacao offers

So much to C. This Dutch island offers a multicultural experience and some of the finest diving in the world

ANDREW JOHN VIRTUE DOBSON metronews.ca/TIFF dobbernationloves.com Follow @metrotoronto and @dobbernation

Curacao (pronounced KEWRE-SOW) is a Dutch island in the Caribbean and the "C" in the ABC islands alongside Aruba and Bonaire.

Located just off the coast of Venezuela, the island features a unique multicultural mix, playing home to 150,000 residents who hail from 55 different countries.

The island also offers visitors plenty of opportunities to lie on sun-soaked white sandy beaches; to go on underwater adventures via top-rated scuba diving sites; to see the colonial charms of its capital, Willemstad; and sample cocktails spiked with Curacao's iconic blue liqueur.

Curacao's premiere 366-room property, Santa Barbara Beach and Golf Resort, is a short 30-minute drive from the airport and situated between the Caribbean Sea and Spanish Water Bar.

The resort's sprawling property features an 18-hole championship golf course designed by Pete Dye, as well as a spa, tennis courts, bike rental, 120-slip marina, four restaurants, three pools and inviting beach.

In 2013, Scuba Diving Magazine ranked Curacao as One of the World's Best Dive Destinations. Those looking for adventure in a lively underwater world can do so with Ocean Encounters, which has a little office set up at the end of Santa Barbara's beach. Morning departures include two dives at Director's Bay and Newport — a perfect opportunity to swim with giant sea turtles while schools of several hundred bright yellow fish descend along a colourful coral wall.

Those looking to hop off the beach and indulge in an afternoon of rest and relaxation are offered a perfect sanctuary at Atabei Spa.

The inspiration for the Santa Barbara's luxury spa stems from the ancient culture and rituals of the Arawak people, the original inhabitants of the island. Spa guests enjoy a co-ed relaxation lounge featuring complimentary refreshments and spa food before being escorted to their very own private suite which includes a personal vanity, rain shower and outdoor relaxation patio.

Enjoy Atabei's signature treatment, the Stemps Massage, which incorporates classic hands-on technique with sachets of locally grown herbs dipped in warm organic oil.

Picturesque Willemstad is the capital of Curacao and its historic centre can be found on UNESCO's World Heritage List. Willemstad is divided into two neighbourhoods, Otrobanda and Punda, located on either side of the city's canal.

You can easily explore the area on foot. Highlights include a stroll across the Queen Emma Pontoon

Birthplace of Shakespeare

You don't have to be an English major to be moved by a visit to Stratfordupon-Avon, the birthplace of William Shakespeare. The bard's hometown is a vibrant overnight side trip you can easily make, about a two-hour train ride northwest of London. And like a lot of famous out-ofthe-way destinations, there is a tawdry, touristy side thriving happily alongside the peaceful, countrified atmosphere of this city of 25,000 — riverboats, statues, swans and all. A visit to Shakespeare's birthplace is a must, where you can catch one of his plays being performed right on the premises. Go to visitbritain. COM. DOUG WALLACE/METRO

Getting together with friends for the long weekend may mean packing up and heading away or meeting at a friend's backyard.

Looking for a recipe that serves two purposes? This Grilled Turkey Satays with Peanut Sauce dish can be prepared for dinner or as an appetizer! Served over basmati rice, it makes a great meal or it works just on its own with drinks to get the party started.

Look for boneless skinless turkey breasts in your local grocer. And not to worry if you don't find any. Simply pick up a turkey breast and remove the skin and bone to slice up into thin strips for the satays.

If you are going to serve them up as a dinner dish, there's no need to skewer. Just you cut the breast into larger pieces and grill to ter, water and hoisin sauce until smooth. Add ginger, vinegar, soy sauce, sesame oil and chili paste and whisk until combined. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve.

2. Using a chef's knife, the cut turkey crosswise into thin slices (about 1/4-inch thick) and place into a large bowl. Add the soy sauce, sesame oil, ginger and garlic; stir to coat well. Let stand for 15 minutes or cover and refrigerate for up to 8 hours.

3. Using small soaked skew-ers thread turkey onto skewers and place on platter. Place skewers on greased grill over medium high heat and grill, turning once for about 6 minutes or until no longer pink inside.

Land a job in social media. How to stand out in a massive pool of pictures, posts and pins

LAUREN MARINIGH

It's probably one of the most sought-after jobs for Gen Y. I mean, who wouldn't dream about getting paid to be on social media?

But believe it or not, working in social media isn't as easy as you may think. Just because you're really clever on Twitter, share great selfies on Instagram, or have 1,000 friends on Facebook, doesn't mean you are going to land a job in social media.

So how can you get into this industry, what is required of you — and what should you be doing to stand out?

Understanding social media

It's one thing to be on every latest and greatest social media platform, but you have to make sure you are using these platforms in the right way and have an in-depth understanding of how to use these platforms for business.

Everyone can have Facebook, Instagram, Vine, etc. and have a good understanding of using it, but personal use and business use are entirely different.

Lucky for you, there are a lot of resources available online.

Read blogs, attend free webinars, follow brands and people that are doing an excellent job in the social media realm.

Realize that social media is always changing, so it's going to require you to stay on top of it. Do your research and always be on the lookout for ways to improve your skill set

Your social media

If you want to work in social media, you should probably make sure you have a pretty rockin' social media presence yourself.

I have a professional Twitter account that I use to share

What sort of skills will I need?

Depending on the job in question, you may need industryspecific knowledge or experience to be a strong candidate. In general, social media jobs require a combination of the following:

- Preferably an education in journalism, marketing, advertising, communications or a similar related field.
- A strong understanding of all social platforms (even if you're not on them).
- Familiarity with analytics: what software to use, how to interpret data, how to use this data to improve business or achieve a specific goal.
- Excellent writing ability, including samples that demonstrate your ability to write for any type of brand or voice industry-related content, join in on conversations with other professionals and stay up to date with agencies and industry professionals.

I also have a personal account to post those useless tweets about what I'm eating for dinner.

Work on building your social media presence and make sure you are easy to find. Employers will look this up, especially if you're applying for a job in social media.

Working in social media isn't just about loving the latest and greatest platforms. You have to be able to support your love for social media with knowledge and experience.

Lucky for you, social media is easily accessible to anyone so you can start learning with just a click of your mouse.

Huskies duo swept into pros

Two members of the Saint Mary's Huskies were drafted into the Canadian Football League on Tuesday night.

Defensive lineman Nigel Romick was the first Huskies player selected in the 2014 draft. He went in the third round, 23rd overall, by the expansion Ottawa Redblacks.

Huskies defensive back Eric Black was taken two rounds later, 38th overall, by the Toronto Argonauts.

All told, eight players from the Atlantic University Sport football conference were taken, including St. Francis Xavier X-Men wide receiver Devon Bailey, who was taken by Edmonton sixth overall.

The other selections were defensive back Raye Hartmann of St. F.X. (Round 4, Edmonton), defensive lineman Quinn Everett of Mount Allison (Round 6, Winnipeg), defensive lineman Kirby Fletcher of Acadia (Toronto), defensive lineman Martin Pesek of Acadia (Hamilton) and offensive lineman Terry Hart of St. F.X (Saskatchewan).

Rangers shake off Penguins in Game 7

NHL playoffs.

Lundqvist the hero in N.Y.C. as question marks surround loaded Pittsburgh club

New York Rangers coach Alain Vigneault had trouble finding the words to describe goaltender Henrik Lundqvist er Henrik Lundqvist.

"He's OK," Vigneault said finally with a small shake of his head.

Except that is, in Game 7s. In Game 7s, Lundqvist is unbeatable.

And so are the Rangers.

Frustrating Sidney Crosby and the Pittsburgh Penguins one final time, Lundqvist made 35 saves to lift New York to a 2-1 win on Tuesday night and give his resilient team an unlikely spot in the Eastern Conference final.

"I was so tired at the end," Lundqvist said after setting an NHL record with his fifth straight Game 7 triumph. "But it was just a great feeling when you know it's a done deal and we did it."

Brian Boyle and Brad Richards scored for New York, which rallied from a 3-1 series deficit for the first time in the franchise's 88-year history.

The Rangers did it behind Lundqvist, who stopped 102 of the final 105 shots he faced over the final three games.

Pittsburgh fell to 2-7 all time at home in Game 7s, including three such losses in the past five seasons.

This one might have been the most painful for the core of Sidney Crosby, Evgeni Malkin and coach Dan Bylsma that seemed pointed toward a dynasty after winning the 2009 Stanley Cup.

Crosby, who led the league in scoring and is an MVP finalist, managed just one goal in 13 playoffs games.

Just as importantly, five springs have now come and gone without Pittsburgh getting a cup.

Crosby understands the dressing room could have a very different look next fall.

"I think there's always questions," Crosby said. "When expectations are high and you don't win that's normal. I'm sure there will be a lot of questions." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

- Transmissions. Six-speed automatic
- Base price (incl. destination). $25,370 (I4), $31,430 (V6)

Market position

The midsize sedan segment is packed with worthy competitors, but most are going exclusively to four-cylinder engines, some of them turbocharged. The Camry is one of only a few with an available V6 engine.

Points

- V6 engines are often reserved for the top-line trim models in midsize cars, so it's nice to see it available in a lower level.
- The extensive makeover it'll get for 2015 is unusual this early in the model's life cycle, but Toyota wants to keep it fresh in this tough segment.
- The SE trim comes with paddle shifters, skirt package, and unique grille.

Safety

Front, side, and curtain airbags; driver and passenger knee airbags; electronic brake force distribution and assist; Smart Stop Technology.

Camry covers all the bases

Review. The Toyota Camry proves its popularity with a multifaceted appeal

JIL MCINTOSH

The Toyota Camry is North America's top-selling passenger car by volume, and it's not hard to see why. It hits a combination of roominess, performance, and price that buyers look for in the midsize sedan segment.

The Camry comes with a 2.5-litre four-cylinder engine, making 178 horsepower, starting at $23,750 (MSRP) and moving through three trim lines to a high of $30,560. I drove the optional 3.5-litre V6 engine, which makes 268 horsepower. It comes in two trim levels: my SE V6 tester, starting at $29,810, and the XLE V6 at $33,625.

Although slightly less fuel-efficient than some of its V6-equipped competitors, the Camry delivers linear acceleration, plenty of passing power at highway speeds, and smooth shifts from its six-speed automatic transmission.

The steering is light and the car is easy to manoeuvre; overall, it's a pleasant car to drive. It's also quiet, with a smooth ride that handles bumps quite well.

The exterior styling is a bit dull, but the interior is handsome, with controls that are easy to reach and use. There's lots of small-item space, including a covered cubby in the centre stack that hides the USB port and charging outlet, so you can plug in your devices and keep them away from prying eyes.

Every trim line includes a backup camera, Bluetooth wireless streaming, cruise control and heated mirrors, and everything except the base four-cylinder LE model comes with a navigation system, satellite radio, garage door opener, power driver's seat, and fog lamps. My tester included a premium package that adds leather heated seats and suede-like upholstery, and a blind spot monitoring system that warns if another vehicle is alongside when you're changing lanes.

The seats are comfortable and supportive, and there's good legroom in the back. The rear chairs fold down to open a pass-through from the trunk, but they don't fall completely flat.

Stayed tuned for 2015: The Camry will keep its engines and basic platform, but will sport completely new styling that will be bolder than what you've seen before.

How should fuel consumption be measured now?

Bye-bye, miles per gallon. Gas-based measures are losing relevance in a world of alternative fuels, and may not be accurate

PILOT

Miles per gallon (MPG), and its eccentric metric cousin, "litres per 100 km," were designed primarily to measure gasoline consumption.

But now that we're using other sources of energy, like diesel, ethanol blends, natural gas, and electricity, these gasoline-derived terms have lost some of their relevancy, and will continue to do so.

They will continue to hang around, however, because like this crazy, creeping vine we have in the backyard, they have a substantial root structure. As such, they have become the reference point.

Take for example, what the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) came up with, to help customers understand electric car "fuel efficiency" — some-thing called miles per gallon equivalent, or MPGe for

The EPA's formula for establishing this says 33.7 kilowatt-hours of electricity are equivalent to one (UŠ) gallon of gasoline. The formula can be transferred to metric, to get Le/100 km. The Canadian Nissan Leaf, for example, is rated at 1.9/2.3 Le/100 km (city/highway).

Does that work for you? It doesn't work for me.

It certainly feels like it's stretching the descriptive powers of MPG and L/100 km.

It's like putting a small T-shirt on a standard schnauzer: It does the job, yes, but it's tight and the schnauzer is not happy.

MPG and L/100 km are even having a hard time with the gasoline thing. Many consumers these days complain that their real-world fuel efficiencies rarely match those advertised by the auto-

Natural Resources Canada is addressing some of this. The ministry demands that manufacturers adhere to new and expanded fuel-testing protocols starting with 2015 model-year vehicles. Unlike previously, the vehicles will also go through cold cycles, air-conditioning cycles, highspeed cycles, and quick acceleration cycles.

But confusing things on the mileage front is all the ethanol the petroleum companies are putting in our gasoline. Each province determines if it wants renewable content in its transportation fuel and at what percentage, but the fuel companies are federally regulated to have at least five per cent average national ethanol content in their fuels.

They're apt to put more in, because ethanol is cheaper than gasoline.

Ethanol may be cleaner, but it has less energy per volume, so fuel economy suffers. The signs at the pumps in Ontario usually say something like, "May contain up to 10 per cent ethanol." Consumers Translation: have no way of knowing how much ethanol is in their tanks. (FYI, diesel contains more energy per volume than gasoline.)

Maybe one day we'll have an energy detector on our "transportation device" to determine exactly how much energy we have on board, regardless of its type, form, or volume, and that energy could be expressed in a new universal energy measurement which would make sense to everyone on the planet, regardless of faculty in science matters.

Until then, I guess we need to embrace the mystery, and continue to realize that our driving habits and lifestyles are still some of the biggest determinants of transportation fuel use.

On that note, I am very proud of how much fuel I saved of late by adopting a more conservative acceleration approach - I think it translates to about 18 furlongs to the quart, give or

Phantom Drophead Coupé Waterspeed Collection. Special series pays homage to Sir Malcolm Campbell's record-breaking exploits

Inspired by the world waterspeed record-breaking exploits of Sir Malcolm Campbell, the new collection of convertibles showcase the levels of craftsmanship and attention to detail that set Rolls-Royce apart from all other companies in the luxury car market.

The Rolls-Royce Phantom Drophead Coupé Waterspeed Collection is a special bespoke series that will only ever run to 35 examples, each of which will be finished in a special Maggiore Blue.

It's a colour developed to pay homage to the Bluebird K3, Campbell's famous Rolls-Royce powered watercraft that on September 2, 1937 hit a top speed of 129.5 mph (208.41 km/h) across Lake Maggiore on the Italian-Swiss border. The run set a new world waterspeed record.

And with the Waterspeed Collection, Rolls-Royce looks like it's trying to set records, too. The Maggiore Blue paint is applied in nine layers and then is sanded back by hand to ensure a perfect surface to receive the finishing lacquered coat.

But it doesn't stop there, as the company's master coachline painter (what U.S. customers would call a pinstriper) then spends four hours adding coachlines and Bluebird motifs.

The Phantom Drophead usually comes with a teak decking cover that raises to receive the roof when the top is down, but this has been replaced, for the first time, by brushed steel.

However, each panel of this steel is hand beaten into shape, a task that takes 70 hours, then the brushed finish is also achieved by hand, adding a further 10 hours on to the process.

Inside, the doors feature hand engraving and there is prodigious use of Abachi wood. Chosen for its special qualities — it's cool to the touch and has a satinlike finish — it is the first time the material has ever featured in a factory-built Rolls-Royce.

As a finishing touch, there's a hand-embroidered panel on the glovebox which lists all of the records Campbell achieved at Lake Maggiore and Coniston Water.

"This very special motor car serves to pay a perfect homage to my grandfather's remarkable acts of British daring and endeavour," said Donald Wales, grandson of Sir Malcolm Campbell. "The extraordinary attention to detail and commitment to engineering excellence so evident in these motor cars perfectly echoes the lengths my grandfather and his colleagues went to in their pursuit of the waterspeed records."

The car was revealed in Chelsea, London, on Tuesday in front of an exclusive audience of invited guests and will make its first public appearance at the Concorso d'Eleganza at the Villa D'Este classic car show in Italy on May 23. AFP

When we first hitched a ride on the seductive, Emmyguzzling turbo charger that is Mad Men, Don Draper was shuttling his kids around in a 1959 Oldsmobile Dynamic 88. Right then and there we knew we were in store for a tour d'elegance. Mad Men's detail-obsessed creators take fastidious pains to nail every aspect of the time period; from fashion minutia and decor choices to the agency's whip-smart product messaging. Basked in sunlight and California vibes, Megan's green Austin-Healey greets Don at LAX in the most memorable scene of the season seven premiere. The snazzy convertible's low-slung profile accentuates her legs, on full display in a high-hemmed pale blue shift dress. After sharing a welcome smooth, the ad man props opens the passenger door for Megan, signalling that he can drive. She rebuffs his chivalry with a brusque excuse about not wanting to move the seat and takes the wheel.

Last-gen Outlander a confident bet

Second gear.

2007 to 2013 Mitsubishi Outlander

JASON MCCALLUM

The second-generation Mitsubishi Outlander was recently replaced by a new model for 2014, effectively moving the model fully into used crossover territory. Outlander was Mitsubishi's shot at the Honda CR-V, Toyota RAV4, Ford Escape, Subaru Forester, and a plethora of other crossover models.

Key draws? The Outlander has an extensive powertrain warranty with 160,000 kilometres of coverage and roadside assistance, top-rated crashtest performance, and decent overall bang-for-the-buck.

The test drive

Confirm all power windows are working properly, and can go up and down fully a few times in near silence without any grinding, clicking or binding noticed. Some owners of earlier models complain of power windows that stick, bind or even fall out of their tracks.

Check for proper air conditioner operation, noting that some owners have complained of premature failure of one or more air conditioner components that left the system inoperative.

If the model you're checking out has the automatic transmission/V6 combination, note that difficulty or an inability to shift out of park is typically caused by a faulty brake-pedal switch or solenoid in the gear shifter itself. These parts were updated in later Outlander models.

What owners like

Outlander's pricing, feature-content bang-for-the-buck, extensive warranty coverage and safety scores attracted shoppers to showrooms initially, with adequate power output, smooth performance, that two-piece tailgate and decent rear-seat legroom sealing

What owners dislike

Common complaints include a cheap, plasticky interior, easily scratched surfaces and an audio display screen that's hard to read if the sun is shining on it.

Engines

Engine options were a 2.4-litre 168-horsepower four-cylinder or a 3-litre V6 with 220 to 230 horsepower depending on the year. Front- or four-wheel drive models were

CONTRIBUTED

The verdict

With Outlander's extensive warranty coverage and fairly short list of common problems, a used model with a thumbs-up from a mechanic prove a reliable crossover for years to come.
